

Interactive Learning for Trade Shows

In accordance with the movement towards tighter controls of the allocation of NRoSO CPD points for trade shows, these shows must now have an element of 'interactive learning' to be awarded NRoSO points (up to 6 points).

Examples of interactive learning include:

- A presentation or seminar containing pesticide-related content or a specific sprayer operator related demonstration, e.g. the Sprays & Sprayers arena at Cereals.
- A completed questionnaire from the member proving they have gained specific pesticide-related knowledge.
- A 'knowledge trail' which requires members to attend several exhibitor stands and have a card stamped to prove they have received substantial pesticide-related content.
- A clear element of educational content related to the safe use of pesticide spraying as distinct from the opportunity to see static demonstrations of new equipment.

Duties of the trade show organisers

The organisers of the show will need to apply to NRoSO for CPD points rather than individual exhibitor stands (unless instructed otherwise). NRoSO encourage show organisers to work closely with exhibitors when submitting the application to ensure members receive clear guidance on how to achieve points whilst at the show.

It is the event organisers' responsibility to complete a spreadsheet containing details of the NRoSO members who have obtained points. The NRoSO administrator will issue guidance on the information required within the spreadsheet once the application for points has been approved.
